The trip from Washington to Atlanta was a continued ovation. At nearly every station telegrams were received or committees met inviting them to visit points not laid down in the programme; and at many towns and villages where the train stopped for a few minutes only calls were made upon the Postmaster-General and the others for speeches, which were generally given. The railroad officials provided them with their best coaches, and made their travelling everywhere the citizens showed to the ut-

CALL UPON THE GOVERNOR. Last night the distinguished visitors, in company with a number of prominent business-men and railroad officials, called upon the Governor at the Executive Mansion. About fifteen minutes were spent there in where it was arranged that a public meeting should be held, and were assigned seats around the Speaker's chair.

The hall was filled with merchants, manufacturers, and other citizens, including most of the officials of the railroads centering here. A small number of ladies were also present The meeting was called to order by General T. M. Logan, who, on behalf of the commercial bodies of the city, called the Mayor to the chair, and requested the members of the press present to act as

Address of Mr. Hubbard. Mayor Carrington introduced as the first speaker Hon. Mr. Hubbard, chairman of the ommission, who said:

Ladies and Gentlemen,-The Postal Commission as appointed by act of Congress July 10, 1876, and by an amendment to the act, was required to ascertain what should be the proper compensation to be paid by the United States Government for the transmission of the mails, whether by railroad, stage-coach, or on the water. The commission during the past summer and winter travelled over all the other sections of the country, contenting themselves with a bare visit for a day or so to one of the cities of the South (Atlanta), supposing that thereby they had done their duty so far as the South was concerned.

I am ashamed and sorry to make such a confession as that gentlemen, but so little did we know at that time of the wants of the South and to what an extent the South had been neglected in the distribution of the patronage of the Government.

So little did we then appreciate the rights and obligations of the North and the General Government to the South that I trust we may be pardoned for our omission in this respect. But, thanks to the kindness of an acquaintance we met at Atlanta-Mr. R. R. Bridges, of Wilmington-we were invited by him to travel through the South, and have since the 1st of April last travelled along the coast line as far as New Orleans; and then again starting, going over the air-line to Atlanta; returning thence by the Chattanooga and Kennesaw route, stopping at this as the last of the stations on our journey through the South.

RICHMOND THE LEADING CITY OF THE SOUTH. We stopped here last because we knew that Richmond was the leading city of the South, and whatever views Richmond may take upon the matters which we have the honor to present will receive great consideration throughout the entire southern States. [Applause.]

I stated that the duties of the commission were to ascertain and report to Congress what was the proper compensation for the transmission of the mails. In order to know what compensation should be paid it is necessary in the first place that some principles be established upon which the Department should be regulated in its dealings with the public; or, in other words, what appropriations should be made by the Government for the support of the postal service. The expenses of the Department may be limited by the receipts of the Department; while, on the other hand, they may be based upon the wants of the public for postal service and postal accommodation; that is, Congress may say, Mr. Postmaster-General, tell us what are the wants of the public for postal service, what, in your opinion, this the necessary appropriations without regard to the receipts of the Department. GROWTH OF THE BUSINESS. Mr. Hubbard next discussed the question whether the Department should be made self-sustaining or should depend upon the wants of the people. He gave some statements relative to the enormous increase in business and other correspondence, and the efforts of the Department to keep apace with the demands made upon them. THE FAST MAILS.

The commission cannot say which will be adopted by Congress, but they must present to Congress the two phases of the case, and ask them which shall be adopted; and they can say to Congress: If you prefer either course, such and such a result will follow.

I cannot, however, undertake to make you a speech. That is no part of my business on this trip. I am the guest of the commission merely, and I am going along with them to see what they may discover and assist them if possible in ascertaining what may best be done for the benefit of the postal service in the southern States. I know how zealously they have been laboring in furtherance of this object. I was Postmaster-General Key is a fine-looking man, of dignified manner and pleasing address. His few remarks made last evening were without oratorical effort, but it is easy to see that he is an accomplished public speaker. Mr. Hubbard, the chairman of the commission, seems to be thoroughly posted in regard to the postal service, and no doubt has had previous experience in that line. He pronounced route "root" through the way they called it in New England, but down here he had ascertained that it was pronounced "rout." This was only one of the many things he had learned in the South under the instruction of his good friend the Postmaster-General. Mr. Hubbard presented all of his points clearly He spoke next of the value of postal cars and fully in a quiet, business-like way. Mr. man and talks well. Mr. Bassett did not speak. He has the reputation of being a Co.'s. gentleman of fine attainments. Mr. Marall, while protesting that he was not oratorically gifted, managed to "sandwich'

DR. SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP, SEA-WEED

TONIC, AND MANDRAKE PILLS .- These medicines have undoubtedly performed more cures of consumption than any other remedy known to the American public. They are compounded of vegetable ingredients, and contain nothing which can be injurious to the human constitution. Other remedies advertised as cures for Consumption probably contain opium, which is a somewhat dangerous drug in all cases, and if taken freely by consumptive patients it must do great injury; for its tendency is to confine the morbid matter in the system, which, of course, must make a cure impossible. SCHENCK'S PUL-

MONIC SYRUP is warranted not to contain a particle of opium; it is composed of powerful but harmless herbs, which act on the lungs, liver, stomach, and blood, and thus correct all morbid secretions, and expel all the diseased matter from the body. These
